Teakle House, 2002

Historic Overview:

Robert T. Teakle, who built some of the more fashionable houses in the city, built this house in 1889. Some of the many features of the house include the use of cedar shingles, clapboard siding and a Palladian style window on the second floor of the façade. The house represents a transition from a more ornate Victorian era style to the simpler designs of the turn of the century.¹
